The most interesting public event I've ever seen was a dance competition I went to with my dance team. It took place in 2019 in Vilnius, Lithuania, where we had to go to take part. Except us, there were a lot of different dance teams that came there to have a shot on dance battles.

The competition involved performances that we needed to show and a final ceremony. Everyone looked so passionate about their work while performing and we were there for it!

By the end of the final ceremony we suddenly found out that we <sup>had</sup> even won a prize! All of us were grateful for ~~such~~ experience that incredible.

I've once attended a public event about applying for lots of colleges and universities. It took place at a hotel, The name I unfortunately forgot, but it's said to be a 5 star hotel. Many colleges and universities took part in the event, looking forward to giving the teens who just have finished school a chance to study ~~in the~~ for a job they might find interesting. Each college and university had its own booth, some even had their mascot present. Some gave away free gifts, some asked to pay money to get a gift. At the end of the event, the leaders gave out a speech, a big "thank you" for those who came to the event, and gave the future students lots of wishes for luck and success in their studies.
